The Business File

The one page that stops ChatGPT giving you generic answers

You pay about £20 a month for AI. It is genuinely good. And every single morning it wakes up knowing nothing about you.

You explain your business again. You explain how you write again. You explain what you charge and who your clients are and why you never take on that one type of job, again.

Then the chat window closes and all of it is gone.

That is not a limit of the AI. It is a limit of how you are using it. The fix takes five minutes and costs nothing.

What this is

One page about your business that you keep in a plain text file. You paste it at the top of a chat, and from that moment the AI is answering as someone who knows your business instead of a stranger guessing.

No install. No signup. No new subscription. It works with whatever you already pay for.

Fill this in

Copy everything between the lines into a note on your computer. Fill in your own answers. Keep it short. One or two lines each is enough, and rough is fine, because you will improve it every time you use it.

MY BUSINESS

What we do, in one sentence a stranger would understand:

Who our clients usually are (industry, size, what they have in common):

What we actually charge (ranges are fine, this matters more than you think):

How many people we are, and who does what:

HOW I WORK

How I want things written (blunt and short, warm and chatty, formal, no jargon):

Things I never say or agree to:

The tools we actually use (accounting, email, calendar, wherever the work lives):

WHAT MATTERS RIGHT NOW

The goal for the next three months:

The thing that is currently costing me the most time:

The type of work I want more of, and the type I want less of:

RULES FOR YOU (the AI)

Ask me a question if you do not have enough to go on. Do not invent numbers, names or dates. If you are guessing, say so. Write in British English. Keep it short unless I ask for detail.

Now watch it work

1. Open a new chat with whatever AI you use.
2. Paste the whole filled-in page in first.
3. Then ask it something you asked it last week. A client email, a price, a bit of writing, a decision you are chewing on.

The answer will be different. Not cleverer, more specific. It will use your prices, your tone, your situation. That difference is the entire point, and you just got it for free.

Do this today: fill in the first section only, the four business questions. Paste it in and ask the AI to draft one email you have been putting off. Two minutes, and you will see it immediately.

What happens next

Once you have felt the difference, the obvious question is why you are pasting this in by hand every time, and what else the AI could do if it knew this much about you all the time.

That is what the AI Company Brain Starter Kit is. Your business file becomes a permanent memory the AI reads first, sitting in plain files you own forever. On top of it sit ready made jobs with normal names: the weekly review, the chase email, the meeting notes to actions, the proposal drafter. You run them instead of describing them.

It is £19, it takes half an hour to set up, and it uses the AI subscription you already have.

One more thing, for later

There is a day that comes for most business owners who hold client information. A client asks, usually in writing, whether their information has been put into any AI tool.

Nothing in this page creates that problem, and you should not worry about it today. But when that day arrives, there is an answer, and it does not mean giving up the AI. We will send you that when it is useful, not before.
